FRIDAY, JULY 14 1738.

953.

HERE are a certain Set of People in the World, who are in their Conduct alike troublesome to others and ridiculous themselves, from a wayward Humour of Cavilling at every thing, and that in such an obstreperous Manner, as renders it almost equally unfit to answer or be silent. One of this Sort of Men, if he is in a mix'd Company, sets up for a Dictator. He affirms, he denies, he contradicts, he disputes, he declaims, all in the Language of the Bear Garden, with an Oath instead of a Proof, and a rabble of ill Names in the Place of an Argument. Such a Bully as this is the Pest of that Part of the Town to which he resorts; he is a Terror to civil People, the Delight of the Vulgar, and the Jest of the Wise, if ever he falls in their Way. The very Counter-part of such a Heitor, is an opinionative Writer full of himself and his Cause, and equally void of Sense and of Manners. Such a one retails the thread bare Maxims of his Party, as if they were the Sentences of Oracles, which to attempt to examine, he construes an Act of impiety, and falls upon you at once with all the Vehemence and Malice which distinguish a Bigot, and instead of ever hearkening to Reason, throws out fresh Loads of provoking Epithets, mingled with barbarous Inuendos, and the coarsest hard Names, all he forces you, for your own Sake, to be quiet, and then he struts about and boasts of Victory, as if he had triumphed by dint of Argument, and had all the Reason and Justice in the World on his Side.

I am persuaded that the Author or Authors of the White Fryars Common Sense, have got some such Notions as these in their Heads, and fancy, by continued showers of Stink-pots, to force every Man who has any Tenderness for his Character, out of the Field, that they may not be interrupted in their Jack-pudding Marangues, but be left to dance, tumble, and talk the People into taking their poisonous Packets for the Cure of such chimerical Distempers, as the Masters of these Pickle-herring are pleased to tell them they are troubled with. But if this be their Design, I am morally certain they will be disappointed; for the time is not yet, or I believe ever will come, that the Constitution will be so pusillanimously deserted by its Friends, merely to avoid the Reproaches of its enemies. For my own Part, I enter'd the Lists fully determined never to be moved by any Scurrility, either in Verse or in Prose, written or spoken. I saw the Treatment that I have met with, and therefore it is so far from giving me Pain, that it hath given me Pleasure: I am convinced that Billingsgate is the sole Resource of the Party; for I have the Charity to think, that if they could have Refuted me, they would not have had recourse to calling Names; and this being the Case, let them Rail on, I shall write on for all that.

THERE is nothing more common, than for the Authors of the Craftsman and Common Sense, to cry out against Prosecutions on Libels; because, say they, we tend to destroy the Liberty of the Press; but how? By, by hindering Men from exposing an Administration to be ever so bad. This supposes, that there may be bad Administrations as well as good ones; and they would infer, that a good Administration ought to be tender of punishing Libels, because a bad one may come, when writing very freely would be a virtue. If this be arguing justly, as I am sure it is, the Sum of all that looks like Argument in their papers; then, say I, that all Attempts to decry, to vilify, to load with Obloquy, such as defend an Administration, are as evident Invasions of the Liberty of the Press as any Prosecutions. For there may be Opinions from bad Motives as well as good ones; there may be Conspiracies as well as Associations, and people who covered themselves with the Name of a Country Party, have been in the Wrong, and the same Thing may happen again; and how shall this be detected? If any who call themselves Patriots, pretend to make it Criminal to inquire into their Claims, that Appellation, and have the Assurance to add the Name of every Man who writes against them to their Proscription? This is a direct Violation of their own Principles, and therefore if they have offered any thing of Weight in defence of themselves, it defends us too; nor can they make a worse Compliment to the People, to whom they pretend to Appeal, than this of telling them, that they ought not to listen to any thing said by the other Side, since if there could be nothing reasonable said on that Side, or if those who wrote thereon were incapable of writing Reason, it would become them, it would be their Interest to bid the People hear us. All the little Arts they practise at present, tend merely to begging the Question, and leading those to whom they write, from the Point which they ought ever to keep in View, the true State of Things, and the publick Welfare. If there be any thing in what I now say; if there be any thing in what I have heretofore said, which looks like Arguing in favour of Corruption, let them produce it, and it will go much farther in destroying my Credit, than Twenty of their dirty Appellations, strung one upon another, with as little Regard to Manners as to Truth. But if what I say be just and reasonable, let them not fancy that the People of England are to be Bullied out of their Attention, or called off from hearing what may be for their Benefit, to listen to College Jokes, *Coffee house Jest*s, and unintelligible Tales of broken Fiddlers and Attornies.

As to the repeated Reflections on the Salaries, Pensions and Gratuities, which they suppose the Writers against them have from Somebody or other, they are mere Suppositions, and therefore ought not to be argued upon as Facts. But if we should admit them to be Facts, these Writers can infer nothing from thence to their Advantage. For look into the Preface to the Volume of Common Senses, look into half the Common Senses that have been written, and you will find no Topic more cheerfully insisted upon than the Favour of the Publick, and the great Sale of their Paper? Do they give all this Money to the Poor? Comes there Nothing to the Hands of any Writer? Will they be able to make the World believe this? No certainly! Shall they therefore impute that as a Crime to others, which they Brag of in themselves? Shall they do this, I say, and keep Common Sense in their Title? No! No! the Publick has too much Sense to suffer that. As to the Propriety of Writing, slips of a Pen, or the Errors of a Press, were never nor ought to be objected thereto. Amongst these I am inclined to reckon some odd Expressions in the Common Sense of last Saturday; such as, given away Gratis, Whatever Masque they put on there is a cloven Foot appears. Expert Butchers, which I conceive are not very accurate or intelligible. But these are Trifles, which I shall never again be tempted to take Notice of, and do it now only to comply with their Example.

As to the Paper, intituled, A Word in a Season, &c. I solemnly declare I know nothing of it, or of its Author, any more than they do: But whoever was its Author, or whatever may be in it, for I confess I have not read it, their manner of treating him and it, is equally scurrilous and unjust. A War is a thing of a very serious Nature, and is attended with very serious Consequences; it ought therefore to be well considered: Nor do I ever remember to have heard that any, who pretended to call themselves Patriots, before the Gentlemen in the present Opposition took it into their Heads to make it a Crime to consider of it at all. I do not pretend to say, that the Reasons for a War with Spain, are not very strong and very just: But, this I say, that the stronger and juster they are, the better they will bear examining; and therefore there is no need for calling a Man Rogue and Rascal, for bringing them to the Test. To make use of Billingsgate and Calumny in supporting a good Cause is betraying it; and I will take the Liberty to say, that how great soever Politicians these Gentlemen in the Opposition may take themselves to be, there never was any thing weaker than this way of going on. The Ministry need certainly be under no Apprehensions as to the Consequences of a War, be they what they will, these People have taken them all upon themselves; they will not allow my Reasoning upon the Matter; and if it be, as they say, criminal, to doubt at present of the Expediency of a War, it can never become a Crime hereafter not to have opposed a War at this Time. Truth and Justice never change Sides; where they are now, they will be hereafter; tho' it is to be questioned if the Malecontents, or their Writers, will suffer the People to think so if they can help it.

To conclude, if the Publick will see any thing, it must see, from the Conduct of the Writers in favour of the Opposition, that they are in the Wrong, they declaim continually, they rail at the Government, they invent and publish the most impudent Falsities of those at the Head of the Administration, they injure and insult the Royal Character, and they vilify the Legislature; yet they call themselves, and would have all the World treat them as Patriots, Men of Worth and Honour, Friends to Liberty, and so forth. But if any Body, moved by the Love of Truth, the Regard he has for the publick Peace, the Obligations he may owe to the Government, his Loyalty to his Prince, or his Duty to his Country: I say, if a Man, moved by these Considerations, presumes to examine their Declamations, to refute their Suggestions, to support the Characters of those at the Helm, to defend the present Measures, or to shew the Excellence of our Constitution, he is immediately call'd a Mercenary, a Hireling, a Scribler, a broken Attorney, a Fidler. Is this Argument? Is this Reason? Is this Evidence? Or would any Set of People act thus who had any of these to produce? Let the PUBLICK JUDGE.

R. FREEMAN.

MINERAL WATERS.

A Seasonable Caution to all PYRMONT and SPA Water-Drinkers.

THERE are frequently Imported into this Country divers Druggists and others, who may be distinguished by the having no Marks on the Bottles or Seals on the Glasses.

Whereas no Bottles are to be filled at the Pyrmont Spring without having Imprinted on the Bottles, either in Whole or Part (as in the Margin) the Arms of the Prince of Waldeck, whose Country the said Spring is situated.

SO likewise the true SPA WATERS have the adjoining Impression (being the Arms of the Prince of LIECH, in whose Country the SPA Fountains are situated) either imprinted in Glass on the Neck of the Flask, or laid with the same in Wax on the Cap of the Bottle or both.

Such Pyrmont or SPA Waters as are not thus distinguished are assuredly Spurious; and there are no small Quarrels which imported — which is the Reason of giving this Caution.

It assuredly retrieves the Patient, tho' reduc'd to a mere Skeleton; and immediately cures the most tedious wheezing and almost suffocating Coughs, Hoarseness, Wheezing, Shortness of Breath, Difficulty of Breathing, Pain, or Weight in the Breast, Spitting of Blood, Soreness of the Stomach, Throat, or Windpipe: Also Catarrhs, or Effusions of sharp Humors, and all Pustular and Asthmatick Effects, Heetick Fevers, and insupportable Night Sweats, and Diarrhoea's, or Loosenesses, in a pleasant and most agreeable Manner.
